1 Welcome & Introduction

Dear Friend,

Welcome to the first of 2 parts of Relationship Strategies, which forms part of the Freedom Technology Email Seminar. In this and the next Relationship lesson, we're going to guide you through the simple steps of leading a truly fulfilled life, starting with Building a Life-Long Love Affair with your partner.

2 Fascinating Relationships

Let's dive straight in and start with an extremely controversial statement:

"If you are currently, or have been in the past:

1. Married to, or living with a partner; or
2. Engaged to, or seriously involved with a partner, then you have been exposed to the most dangerous con-trick facing anyone trying to achieve a fulfilled relationship."

That's right: marriage and engagement, in the way commonly understood by the masses, is the biggest con ever perpetrated on the human race since the start of modern history.

Now we fully expect you to have some difficulty in accepting a statement like this, but we did warn you at the beginning of this seminar that you would not find all of the material we cover palatable.

2.1 The Wrong Reasons to Start a Relationship

So let's take some time to show you that relationships in this modern day and age come about by pure fluke, or randomly, and these same random reasons are then used to start a lifetime commitment together. Here are some of the common reasons people 'fall in love', and ultimately end in marriage:

1. They just 'drift' into relationships. This represents just another uncontrolled and random area of their lives;
2. They believe in the myth of 'happy ever after love' and believe that marriage is one way of securing that myth;
3. They want sex, and a committed relationship is the only way they know of getting it;
4. Their sexual (and biological) desires override their logic and make them think that they are 'in love';
5. They want a replacement figure (e.g. Mother, Father);
6. They allow their age to influence their decision, e.g. they think it is 'about time' that they settled down;
7. They allow others (e.g. parents or peers) to pressurize them into getting married, engaged or even start dating;

8. They are just plain scared of being left alone, and out of fear become desperate for a relationship.

If you're currently in a committed relationship, can you identify the reason you started that relationship? Can you identify the reason your partner started? Come on, be honest with yourself - it's only you and us going through this right now. Go back and read the list again, and be honest with yourself.

2.2 The Right Reason to Start a Relationship

Now, in stark contrast to this collection of ludicrous reasons, Freedom Technology Members enter into relationships for one reason only:

A fulfilled relationship commences when both partners believe that the mutual and honest exchange of each other's contribution to the relationship will lead to a temporary increase in happiness for both partners.

Notice the word 'temporary' in the above statement.

For a truly free and happy individual, relationships (both platonic and romantic) are ALWAYS temporary. They don't EXPECT a relationship to last beyond its allotted span, and they know that any attempt to FORCE the relationship to go beyond its natural time-limit would result in unhappiness for both people in the relationship.

This is not a depressing thought at all. In fact exactly the opposite! The Freedom Technology Member has a wonderful, joyous, life-enhancing relationship with their partner, and then may move on to the NEXT different, equally wonderful relationship with a different partner! In this way their life is one of constant growth and development, instead of boredom and stagnation.

Notice we are not suggesting for a minute that it makes sense to have a number of simultaneous 'flings', always on the look-out for someone a little better than the current partner. We ARE suggesting that you simply refuse to stay in a relationship which has ended.

2.3 How Do You Know When a Relationship Has Ended?

A relationship has ended when either:

- there is no longer a mutual and honest exchange of contribution, or
- the initial increase in happiness for both partners has completely disappeared.

When either or both of the situations above come about, it no longer makes sense for the relationship to continue. Going to marital counseling, crying about it, begging your partner for another chance, or demanding that they change to suit YOUR desires, praying to God to save your marriage, or any of the other crazy things we do when a relationship has ended, DOES NOT ADDRESS THE CORE ISSUE. It may delay the inevitable, but it CANNOT recreate the increase in happiness. And if you're not constantly increasing happiness, (apart from the occasional 'rocky') patches in which the strength of each person's commitment is tested), why continue with the relationship?

It's worth pointing out at this point that we are NOT saying that all relationships must be temporary. In fact, later on we are going to show you strategies which virtually guarantee a Life-Long Love Affair. But it's very important that you understand this basic principle:

Expecting a relationship to last forever because your religion says it must, or because that's what you want, or because that's what you've been brought up to believe, is the saddest con a non-Freedom Technology Member can ever fall prey to.

2.4 Aha! Now I Understand!

OK, it's probably necessary to back up a little here and answer a few questions for the sake of clarity. Before we do, if you remember back to one of our first lessons, we're in the process of creating "Aha" moments - moments where we finally understand WHY things may have gone wrong in the past, and what we can do to improve things in the future.

We're NOT convincing you to accept that your life will necessarily become an endless series of short, meaningless flings.

We ARE trying to point out that when expectations and perceptions are incorrect from the start, the basis of any relationship is already flawed, and building a Life-Long Love Affair on flawed principles is bound to fail.

To show you how ludicrous the expectation is that a marriage is for life, let's look at some examples from non-romantic relationships.

2.4.1 Platonic Friendships

Have you ever said to a new friend: "I enjoy your company and I think we have a lot in common. I'd like for our friendship to develop, but I need some sort of commitment from you that the time and energy I invest in you won't be wasted. So I've drawn up this little agreement which basically promises that you will be my friend until one of us dies."

You've never said that to a friend? Good! So why on earth would you want to say that to someone you're proposing marriage to?

Friendships are typically allowed to run their course without the constraints of any contract. When either or both friends decide that there is no longer a mutual and honest exchange of contributions, the friendship ends.

2.4.2 Business Agreements

When two or more partners start a new business together, one of the first things they consider is the framework within which the business will operate. This is usually formalized in a contract, which covers all of the terms and conditions necessary for an effective business partnership. Nothing surprising there.

However, an important part of these contracts is planning for failure. That's right, business people are sensible enough to realize that it's naive to expect a business relationship to last forever, and so draw up guidelines at the beginning for what to do in case the business should dissolve.

Even in business agreements, which often involve significant investment in time and capital, there is NEVER an expectation that the relationship will last forever.

So why have the expectation in marriage?

2.4.3 Marriage Contracts

Before a couple get married, it's common to sign some sort of agreement in which both parties state how they would like to share their possessions. The oldest form of contract is where the union takes place in community of property. This is the default method because you don't have to do anything other than arrive at the place of marriage on the right day at the correct time.

More recently, a more formalized contract has been defined: The Ante Nuptial Contract. (Ante = before. Nuptial = marriage. Contract = Bondage). To complicate matters, the ANC (Ante Nuptial Contract) can be with, or without, Accrual.

Now we're not going to discuss the meaning of each type of contract, but we must make the following point:

By signing ANY of those agreements, you are planning for failure! Every single one of those contracts are agreements on what will happen to your joint possessions when the marriage fails.

So the obvious question is "If a newly married couple (and all the people around them telling them they will live happily ever after) expect their marriage to last forever, why START the relationship with an agreement on what to do when it ENDS?"

Are you beginning to see how much of a con this whole "marriage for life" thing is?

2.5 The Evidence of Statistics

Statistics in most Western nations show that currently, 2 out of every 3 marriages end in divorce. Despite this commonly-known fact, most people still go into marriage with the idea that it is going to last forever. The statistics are proving what we already know - only, most people are too afraid to admit it! They would rather put their heads in the sand and believe a lie than face up to the truth.

At this point we need to stop for a minute and ask the question:

2.5.1 Why Do the Uneducated Expect Lifelong Marriages?

For many, the main reason everyone expects marriage to be for life is because of 'religious' teachings. This is true whether you are religious or not. In recent history religious institutions, particularly the church, have played an important role in shaping our core beliefs and life systems. While we won't discuss any particular religion in this Seminar, we do want to make another controversial statement:

A religion is a system invented by an elite priesthood who desire to extricate value from their followers.

We go to great lengths to prove the accuracy of this statement in our Seminar series on Metaphysical Truths, which you will be receiving in the next few weeks.

Fear is probably the major weapon used by religious con-artists over the centuries. Religious fear is used to ruthlessly cajole the mass of believers into conforming. Fear of damnation, fear of 'going to hell', fear of judgment day, fear of disapproval by the church, fear of being found out for your sins, fear of the devil, fear of asking questions, fear of the answers, fear of facing your own TRUE thoughts and feelings on a daily basis.

As a priest, what better method could you devise for controlling the masses than to pretend that you have a direct line to God, and that he had given you detailed instructions about how other people should behave? If they do not dance to your tune, then you can threaten them with everlasting damnation.

Needless to say, religious teachings on the matter of divorce have caused countless marriages to endure a seemingly endless hell on earth, purely because the couple are too scared to accept that their relationship has reached a natural end. Their church has taught them that divorce is wrong and that they should stick it out.

Without getting ahead of ourselves, this teaching on divorce is certainly NOT biblical. We'll be covering this in a future Seminar topic.

2.6 Open, Honest Relationships

When you understand and embrace the concept that ALL things in Nature are temporary, you are able to enjoy guilt-free, honest, open, loving, non-manipulative relationships with your partner. Why should we think completely contrary to nature in only this one area of our lives? It is further proof of the con that we have been led to believe. Fascinating relationships will last exactly as long as they last, and will end when one, or both partners cease to enhance the other's life values; or it will end when one or both partners start to inhibit, destroy or harm the other's life values.

A VITAL point to understand is that in a relationship like this you are 100% honest with your partner. You would never promise to stay 'until death do us part'. You will promise to stay until such a time that you cease to bring fulfillment to each other. You might promise to do everything in your power to increase the level of fulfillment and enhance your partner's life values, for as long as you are alive.

In contrast, most sheep are con-artists because they will promise that they will stay with their partners forever, come what may. This is either an outright LIE, because they realize (or suspect) that this is a wholly unachievable fantasy, and that there is only a tiny chance that it will work out this way; or simply a very naïve outlook on life. Again, look at divorce statistics all over the world.

3 Wrapping Up

This week's Seminar has been uncharacteristically negative, and we've done this intentionally to change your perceptions of what a marriage and lifelong love affair should be. All we urge you to do, is to think about these things in an open and honest manner, with the will to sincerely seek the truth and to no longer be blinded by lies, no matter how painful this process may be. We GUARANTEE that as the shackles fall away, your life will change in miraculous ways and you will become a happier, more fulfilled and enlightened human being.

Now that we've established correct principles for a relationship we can move on to the far more positive aspects of building a truly fulfilling relationship.

In the next Fascinating Relationships Seminar we'll be covering strategies for turning your romantic relationship into a Life-Long Love Affair. We'll be covering:

1. DATING: the Law of ATTRACTION - Use this Law to find (or keep) your Ideal Partner and avoid falling for the 'wrong' ones.
2. MATING: the Law of EXPECTATIONS, or what men and women each want out of a relationship.
3. EVER-AFTERING: the Law of FIDELITY between a Woman and a Man that leads to long-term fulfillment, and how to ensure that your relationship becomes a life long love affair, in which neither partner feels the need to look elsewhere to have their needs fulfilled.

That's all for this week. We hope you can see how influential the media and religion has been in shaping our world view and opinions about relationships.

Next week we're going to discuss the next of the essential Pillars of Fulfilled Living.

Look out for next week's email entitled FT Seminar 05 – Ultimate Health & Longevity. Even if you're in perfect health, you're going to be blown away! You'll be particularly interested in our Longevity Strategies, which show you how simple it is to live a healthy life to the age of 120 or more!

Side Note: A small percentage of readers are NOT shocked by anything they've read to date. If you're one of them, here's an explanation.

One of the advantages of the Internet is the fact that we can make this information available to large numbers of people at low distribution cost (as opposed to printing books and physically mailing manuals).

The disadvantage is that we know nothing about you. If we did we could dive right in at the appropriate depth and provide new information which WILL shock you. We must lay the groundwork and foundations first.

Please understand this, and bear with us as we bring other readers up to your level of understanding. By the time we've completed the basics of each of the 5 Essential Pillars of Fulfilled Living, we'll be able to move ahead into the really challenging and exciting material. We promised we wouldn't waste your time, and we intend standing by that promise.

To your new truly fulfilled life!
